

Mini Report
The Annual Grumblers' Meeting Hash
Hamworthy Social Club (6.11.16)

We went through the usual preamble down downs and then noticed Fred Barker of 1999 Hamworthy Engineering fame had surfaced in the car park making Greek God mumble about getting his eyes tested as he decided that Lazarus was not alone in rising from the dead.

The Mismanagement policy to cull the mini began to be implemented as we all risked our lives trying to cross the road outside the sports centre with huge 4 X 4's zooming along aiming to consign us to that building on the other side of the Heath near Gravel Hill.

The main had long gone as we trudged toward Canford Heath with the breeze fortunately wafting the land fill smell away from us. The Godfather was directing the rear-enders through old abandon roads and car parks. Oxfam, iPod, Big Trish and Frostbite had enough instinct left to recognise flour and sawdust to know they were still on the trail despite the Hare's intervention. As old timers they did not cross any bars, followed the trail enjoying the friendly banter of insulting old Gits.

Eventually we circumvented the Municipal tip, released several burst of compressed methane, along with lowering our calorie count, to which we all felt so much better for it.

We discussed chaining our neighbours' electronic gates together, putting lighted bangers up car exhaust pipes of objectionable people who park outside your house all day, plus all sorts of other revengeful tactics for anti-social and inconsiderate behaviour.

On that point Y Nam Im caught the old Gits up while one was relieving himself, not very discreetly, on the main footpath with clouds of acrid steam nearly suffocating Teresa's dog. An eye watering moment.

We eventually returned across a field to the Club only to nearly thinned out yet again by avoiding more 4 x 4's trying to cross the road. Having survived this treacherous trail we so much looked forward to our Shandy by the signing on/in board. Oh dear! What is the Wessex coming to when the Shandyman forgets the shandy but not the cups?

Expect next week we will have the shandy but not the cups.
